Democratic Leaders Want Farley To Remain On Job

Pressure Brought on Chairman at Chicago To Keep Him at Party's Head

CHICAGO, July 13.—Tremendous pressure was brought to bear upon James A. Farley today to continue for a time as chairman of the Democratic national committee regardless of next week's convention's choice of a personal nominee.

As the crowds assembled for the big party meeting—virtually certain to renominate the president—Farley's old New York associates urged him to carry one step farther his declaration of yesterday that he would not "take walks" if President Roosevelt runs again. And they reported that he was wavering.

A candidate himself, Farley, who directed the President's 1932 and 1936 campaigns, has long been an opponent of the third term movement. Moreover, he is one of the very few of the many politicians in Chicago who knows just what Mr. Roosevelt's plans are.

The leaders of the third term movement regarded Farley's statement of yesterday as at least a partial victory in their effort to persuade him to direct the 1940 Roosevelt campaign through its early stages, at least.

PRESIDENT WATCHES FROM A DISTANCE

Pre Convention Actions Belie His Reputation.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Believing no regulation for eager interest in politics President Roosevelt said today he gave a good imitation of a man only mildly interested in the Democratic national convention and the ensuing presidential campaign.

While still reserving his decision on a possible nomination he declared fully yesterday that he would not go to Chicago during the convention, presumably not even to make an acceptance speech should that problem arise.

At the same time he indicated his summer schedule would follow a routine of alternate weeks on the Potomac and in Hyde Park, seemingly ruling out any campaign tours.

As he prepared to start that schedule with a Potomac cruise this week and politicians searched his inimitable but tantalizing remarks for eleventh hour hints of his intentions.

Some interpreted his summer plans to mean that if nominated he would make a front porch campaign from the White House and Hyde Park, explaining to the voters that the defense emergency demands on his time and energy precluded any speaking tours.

And almost everyone in official circles felt convinced that he would accept a "half" nomination from the convention.

Whatever his intentions the President did not appear to be troubled by convention or campaign prospects yesterday as he bantered gaily with reporters at

MARION MAN BUYS 4-PLACE AIRPLANE

Dale Hughes Flies Ship Back from Salem, Ill.

Dale Hughes, Marion photographer and aviation enthusiast, yesterday purchased a 1939 Ranger Fairchild plane at Salem, Ill., and yesterday afternoon flew the ship to Marion airport, which will be his new home.

The ship is of the four place deluxe type, has dual controls and is powered by the same type of Ranger engine being used in new U. S. army training ships. The plane is red trimmed in black and the seats for the pilot and passengers are upholstered in red leather. It has a cruising speed of 130 miles an hour.

Mr. Hughes purchased the plane from a Salem resident to whom he was referred by the Fairchild plane company. He was accompanied on the trip to Salem and return by Alvin D. Freeman, another Marion flyer.

Mr. Hughes reported today that he has sold the Lambert Monocoupe plane which he purchased last fall from an Illinois flyer who made a forced landing at the Marion airport during a storm. The ship was purchased by a pilot who lives near Canton but probably will be kept at the airport here for a while, Mr. Hughes said.

MISS RUTH ELLEN MOUNTS and Mrs. Robert Axe of Marion, and Mrs. Paul Edward Lauer and Miss Erma Louise Drake of Prospect were hostesses at a shower complimenting Mrs. Charles Toms of Prospect, last evening at the home of Miss Mounts at 1191 East Center street. Mrs. Toms was presented a corsage and at intervals during the evening the ringing of an alarm clock directed her to her shower gifts. Fan-tan was played, awards going to Miss Donna Lewis and Miss Madeline Hill.

A miniature altar and bridal party centered the table from which refreshments were served. Blue and pink tapers completed the decorative note and presiding were Mrs. Axe and Miss Drake. Tapers in these colors lighted the small tables at which the guests were seated, and miniature tapers in candlesticks were the favors. The rooms were colorful with bouquets of garden flowers.

Guests included Mrs. Toms who was Miss Margaret Lodwig of Prospect before her marriage. Mrs. John Guthrie, Mrs. George Schaefer, Mrs. James Osmun, Mrs. LeRoy Burkepile, Misses Mary Mae Hogan, Mary Ludwig, Lillian Somerlot, Donna Lewis, Margaret Umpcher and Harriet Osmun of Marion, Miss Alice Lightfoot of LaRue, Mrs. William Detweiler, Mrs. Donald Hickman, Mrs. Dore Toms, Mrs. George Thomas, Miss Mary Frances Cochran and Misses Madeline and Mary Ellen Hill of Prospect.

JUST THINGS

By EDNA S. DUTTON

Honest

SHE'S a Miss of only five summers but she knows her styles. She admired her Sunday school teacher's new dress, and with the honesty of a young girl she said: "Your dress is awfully pretty, I like it, but," she added, "it's long." And on the strength of it, she had her gowns shortened.

Things to Know

THINGS we didn't know about furniture and its designers. We've been told that Hepplewhite gained prominence by his well-designed commodes and chests. Characteristic of the band-sawed base and the gracefully curved and tapered legs. He used only mahogany and some satinwood.

Thomas Sheraton was not a manufacturer, as was Chippendale, but sold his designs privately. He has often been called the master of cabinetmaking and in England he was the last of the eighteenth century designers to leave a style, carrying his name.

Hepplewhite, probably the greatest chair designer the world has ever known, was not only a designer but a true artist. His famous chair designs are the shield, the oval and the heart-back, carved with the Prince of Wales feather, wheat ear and honeysuckle motifs.

Wall brackets and hanging shelves were first designed by Chippendale in the middle eighteenth century. Dish rings, also called potato rings, were invented by the Irish sculptor in the last half of the eighteenth century. They were ornamental stands for circular wooden bowls. Their purpose was to protect the polished mahogany table from the hot bowls and were usually placed in the middle of the table all during the meal to hold various dishes.

Menu Contest

AND just in case you haven't got a mind to it, we'd like to remind you that next Saturday is the deadline on the Star's hot weather menu contest. There's money in them that recipes for somebody and it might as well be you. And even if you don't win, isn't there just a bit of satisfaction in sharing with some one else some goodie that you know you will use better than any one else, and puts you right on top of the world with your family and friends?

Party Near Kirkpatrick

A surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Ford of near Kirkpatrick last evening was in honor of the birthday anniversary of the hostess. The table, arranged for refreshments, held three birthday cakes. The evening was spent socially and entertainment included a group of accordions.

L. Huntsman, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Jack, the host and hostess, Rosanna, Virginia Esther, Donnie, Raymond and Guy Ford Jr. The celebrant received a number of remembrances.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge's Bird-Call Signal
Navy Dicky

THERE have been a number of times in my life when, through an experience of my own, I have comprehended the sensations of a woman sentenced to death, and relieved just a few minutes before execution. But I think never have I realized what an unexpected reprieve must mean to a condemned person as I did when Lillian's fingers pressed into my shoulders with the Morse letter, "the cat-bird call."

For I saw suddenly, clearly, how I could save Dicky from walking into the ambush which Leslie's chauffeur must even now be preparing for him. The man could not understand why Leslie did not come out of the thicket of underbrush which he had entered in order to watch unobserved the exchange of the box containing Queen Olga's emeralds, for of course he had no suspicion that Lillian and I had been first in that thicket and that we were holding Leslie prisoner there at pistol point. But he knew that Dicky was an enemy coming straight toward his hiding place. I knew what short shift my husband would have if he reached it, yet I dared not call out to warn him for fear the answer would be a bullet from the chauffeur's revolver aimed at his head.

The Warning

I knew, however, that Dicky would recognize the catbird call when I should give it, for since coming to the farm many years ago we have found great amusement in identifying many birds which find sanctuary there. And when Dicky discovered that I had a certain facility in imitating their calls, he gave me no rest until I experimented with a crude form of ventriloquism, and found that I was able to "throw" the call a short distance away. He even brought to the house a ventriloquist friend who was I fear greatly bored, but who gave me several valuable hints, and I practiced assiduously until I could amuse my family, although realizing my limitations, even Dicky never complained that I exhibit my accomplishments to any acquaintances or friends outside our immediate circles of intimates.

But my limited skill has been of use to us in one or two emergencies, because the people whom we wished to deceive as to our presence near them were not familiar with real bird calls. What Leslie's knowledge of the subject was I did not know, did not dare to think. Leslie was watching Dicky with a gloating anticipatory look in his eyes and was paying no attention to the beguiled man.

Casual Slaughters

By VIRGINIA HANSON

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN Early Wedding

IT IS easy to look back now and see that Sandra and Ivan be- tween them practically signed his death warrant that night. It is less easy to see why Sandra was not warned by Ivan's death. Which brings up Sandra and her stu- pidity that was not so much stu- pidity as a state of credulity and meekness. I believe her suc- cesses had convinced her that she was infallible. On top of that she was without discrimination as her weakness in Ivan shows and she believed in miracles.

This last is the most important single fact to remember—the es- sential clue to Ivan's death. Ivan's belief in miracles. Sandra's belief in miracles.

She came to my room the next morning before I was awake. Ivan had not stirred with me after all. Ivan had not needed her room.

I put on a sheet and I opened the door. Sandra was trying to show my surprise by trying to keep my head from falling loose from my shoulders as it seemed in- creasingly moored.

A surreptitious glance at my wrist told me it was not early as I thought. I had a cereal and found a cassette which she had fastened to my chest. It did not taste too good and tried to get her to sit down. But she would not stand leaving back against the door looking at me and test- ing her hands in a gesture bur- rowed from the stage but expres- sive for once. I thought of great emotion.

Her eyes swollen with weep- ing recalled to me that in reba- nement on the bridge where I had seen her clinging to Ivan. Could she have loved that mourn look? Apparently she had. That was in the name of all the saints, had she promised to marry me?

Perhaps I had been more fully awake or if my head had not felt so light and explosive I might have pressed her for some of the answers which must for a time at least have shaken her belief in her patron saint or her rabbits.

A wavy "I can move over here— we can be together—"
Her voice dropped to a careen- ing murmur. I decided that I had heard enough.
I cleared my throat loudly at the coming door, opened it as usual as possible. They were seated close together on the study couch and they paid no attention to me whatever so that I was able to gratify my curiosity about Jeff. I could see he seemed actually thawed but my brief glance found evidence of a slight softening around the edges of his icy re- serve. His face was perfectly flushed and he was staring at San- dra like a hypnotized but fright- ened bird.

Gerald Beaufort was alone at a table at the Post Exchange res- taurant. I joined him with real pleasure.
You may think what a relief it is to sit down to a meal after the water has brought my order to be with a friend who is an ex- cuse. Not in the army.

He raised his glass of tomato juice in making salute and de- clined to drink at me across the room as my glass eyes that were like him as I was beginning to know him.

Jr. Jalousie Rags
You mean this rag them selves a bit seriously. He ob- served as he sat down the my glass.

I smiled, feeling guilty as if we were just discussing an ab- sent case which was not a good thing to do. We were both paying for our lunch and looking New York's best.

Sandra help in taking it was a study that it wasn't much the fact of that pos- sible I had killed that occasioned the incident on last night as the fact that it happened on the evening.

A man's blame them for that. Sandra makes ugly headlines. You know the subject not al- together fairly. I left Sandra and Jeff in my own planning on my way out.

The eyes flow to my face and my sudden knife hesitated over the last.
I had. He sounded as if he meant it.

Wally is a much nicer person. I looked him for a moment and he looked a perfectly com- mon little fellow.

A disconcerting fact at that. I was just smiling. But when I saw Jeff at her left I don't suppose he seems very romantic to her.

I don't know.
There was literally no expres- sion on the wavy effect which I had seen in my eyes. I am not a little fellow. It was a little fellow's mother in my brain.

Like the man in my typewriter that I pay no attention to. I don't pay much attention to this city on the sense of getting small and thinking this man will be a comedian. I was pretty sure of him. But the thought did not come to my mind that he might have doubts.

There was the only reason for a girl to be observed presently. And the guy eyes were so open and and that I found about the length.

What else?
Murder investigation," he re- minded me. Wife can't testify against her husband. I've studied a bit of law. I added modestly and then quite obviously said no more.

But—but you surely don't think less. I began and with sudden horror remembered San- dra.

The Star Halfback

THE single, great, objective political fact on the eve of the Democratic national convention is that the party has prepared no one to take the place of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who took over its ball carrying duties in March 1933 and never has relinquished the job since.

Only slightly less prominent than Mr. Roosevelt's monopoly of party leadership is the fact he has it in his power to leave Democrats in the lurch by refusing to run for a third term. They are first to admit by their various resolutions urging him to run again that all their eggs are in one basket and Mr. Roosevelt is the basket.

It follows in natural order that if Mr. Roosevelt doesn't leave them in the lurch but does run again Democrats will be grateful. When it is considered that as recently as a year ago many of them couldn't see their way clear to swallowing the idea of a third term the beauty of the strategy used to make them change their minds is evident.

Understandably, Democrats are touchy about this. By a process of rationalization they can convince themselves that Mr. Roosevelt now should run for a third term. It necessarily appears to all others, including pestiferous Republicans, that Mr. Roosevelt decided he was going to run for a third term a good many years before his followers reached the same conclusion.

Otherwise, the star halfback, looking forward to his coming graduation, would have made room for a substitute to step into his shoes when he was through. It won't be easy to convince the country that the third term thing was a phenomenon of 1936, byproduct of a war emergency. The record shows that nothing ever was done to prove a third term wasn't the objective long before the emergency appeared.

The Barrage Starts the Battle

THE hall of destruction being rained on Great Britain by German bombers is the equivalent of an artillery barrage 25 years ago. While world is awaited that the battle of Britain has started, the plain fact is that the engagement already is well under way. Under the circumstances of modern warfare, occupation of territory by enemy troops merely is a sign the battle is over.

Strangely, in view of the information at their command, the tendency among Americans is to think of the military problem in the battle of Britain as one of ferrying troops and equipment across the English Channel. That would be admittedly difficult as long as British ability to resist remained largely unimpaired. It is extremely unlikely that German strategists will attempt it till ability to resist has been diminished.

Thus, it must be noted that submarine warfare is being intensified; shipping vital to Great Britain is being destroyed at a tremendous rate. Ultimately, this would mean starvation and shortage. At the same time, the British battle fleet guarding the island is under constant attack, with Italy making sure that Mediterranean units are kept too busy to be ordered home to replace lost units.

This is the battle of Britain. It is not something which is going to happen tomorrow, or next week, or next month. It is in progress now—today, tomorrow, next week, next month it will be over.

—And Let's Be Positive

THIS is one of those stray ideas which take root, just a sign someone saw in a drug store some place and told about—and someone else told someone else and so on. The way said: WERE NOT ANTI-ANYTHING WERE PRO-AMERICAN

Without knowing what was happening, a lot of Americans have developed into backbiting drivers in politics. We can tell what's wrong with every government on earth, including the Scandinavian. We can get a red neck just thinking about the Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin et al. We blast the daylight out of the dumb bunnies who fall for such tripe—and in the next breath wonder why we put up with the government of our own country.

It needs some blasting to keep it on its toes. That's the only secret there is to letting the people have a voice in government. But it can be blasted off its toes and back on its heels. If the United States is worth being proud of it doesn't hurt to say so once in awhile. Instead of carping about the way things are going to the dogs, Americans profitably could talk up the advantages of their way of doing things. Forget the gosh-awful foreigners and size up the natives for a change.

In politics, a fellow who runs down his opponent but offers nothing constructive on his own hook deserves a licking. The struggle between authoritarianism and liberty is the biggest kind of politics there is. Americans are stumping for liberty; the opposition is stumping for destruction of liberty. Being pro-American these days is more than a gesture of patriotism; it's a declaration of conviction about a way of living. It's something to be positive about!

Two Industrial Magnates Get Things Done in TVA Expansion Program.

By PAUL MALLON

Knudsen

WASHINGTON, July 12—Two of the two industrial magnates, Knudsen and Stettinius, are preparing to enter the TVA expansion program. The two men, who have been working on the TVA expansion program for some time, are now preparing to enter the program. They are preparing to enter the program, which is a part of the TVA expansion program.

Stettinius

But Stettinius apparently decided that if he needed legal advice he might as well get the best and thereupon initiated all procedure by filing for the personal view of no less an authority than the chief justice of the United States supreme court Charles Evans Hughes. He got it, and the matter proceeded forthwith.

The incident, marking another stanza in the saga of the amazing, successful "adventures" of two tycoons in the New Deal, will be kept quiet because such procedure is highly unorthodox, although actually government officials have, in unusual cases, allowed their friends on the high bench personally willing to help.

Planes. Real unconfessed reasons why Packard rejected the $100 plane contract from the national defense commission were many, any one of which was enough. Main difficulty was the refusal of the treasury department to give concessions for depreciation tax allowances if the company entered upon such a large plant expansion investment. You may have noticed immediately after the contract was rejected, the treasury announced it would allow five-year amortization of such investments, which thereupon settled that.

Still remaining open was the refusal of both the British and United States governments to make satisfactory promises of what they would do if Britain was defeated before her 1,000 planes could be delivered. It was only natural that the contractor should expect the British to deposit in the country the money to pay for the planes or require the United States government to take the British place.

These obstacles were overcome rather fortuitously. The first was solved by a $100,000,000 payment for plant expansion, and the second was solved by the British.

Business. Revision of the government's key business index, planned by the Federal Reserve board but not without trepidation. The industrial production figure, used frequently in this column, has for eight years been based on 1923-25 averages as 100. A new base using the New Deal years of 1935-37 as 100 will be submitted to the public in the August issue of the BEB bulletin.

The change will boost the business figures considerably and no doubt draw charges that it was inspired for presidential campaign purposes, although Federal Reserve board is supposed to be nonpartisan.

Just as there is the great number of new important industries built up since 1923-25, including aviation, radio, chemicals. The old index was obviously too heavily weighted with the old dominant products, such as steel and textiles.

Henderson. Price Admistrator Leon Henderson has exceeded the former recognized limits of New Deal boldness by refusing to appoint several recommended friends of Thomas G. Corcoran, the President's ghost, to his national defense organization. A row developed. Words were exchanged, but Henderson's standing at the White House is reported unimpaired and perhaps enhanced.

Today and Tomorrow

Need Soon for Eliminating Obstructions in Path of Total Defense for United States.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THE PRESIDENT told congress this week that his latest request for authorization and appropriations marks a change from a program of "total defense" to a program of "total defense." What, then, is the difference between partial and total defense? Broadly speaking, partial defense means planning orders for all the armaments that the existing factories and shipyards can produce, total defense means investing capital to enlarge the existing plants to establish new additional plants.

There is, of course, no doubt whatever that the existing facilities cannot carry out the arms program which congress favors. A two-ocean navy, a great air force, and the equipment of a very much more considerable modern mechanized army cannot be constructed without an immense expansion of the armament industry itself and of the underlying industries which feed it with machines and materials. No doubt congress will, therefore, grant the president's request.

But between adopting the principle of total defense and putting it into practice there is a wide chasm to be crossed, and there is not yet any concrete advice that the administration is preparing to cross it. The plain fact of the matter is that Washington is not yet organized to plan, to direct, or to administer a great armament program, nor has it yet moved itself to asking for the authority over capital and labor which such a program inevitably requires. We are in the embryonic stage of grandiose authorization, large appropriations, sincere enthusiasm, the gathering together in Washington of an extraordinarily competent collection of executives and experts, the placing of large orders. But the solution of specific difficulties the effort is not organized. There is no real center of responsible direction and authority. And little has been done with lucidity and courage to liberate the national effort from the endless restrictions and complications imposed by vested interests, pressure groups, political indifference, and bureaucratic inertia.

Must Be Well Organized. To say this is no reflection whatever on the able and devoted men who are working on the program. The best men in the world cannot here to be successful if they lack the necessary authority and are not properly organized.

The vice of the present situation in Washington is most clearly revealed by the fact that at the very time when the President is proposing to extend the facilities for making armaments he is still opposing measures to make the fullest possible use of existing facilities. No one will question the wisdom of expanding the facilities. It is absolutely necessary. But on the average the facilities cannot be expanded and increased in much less than eight months. No one knows better than the President how necessary it is to increase the production of military equipment quickly. It is necessary as a measure of sheer defense, as an action to maintain our influence in this hemisphere as a means of speeding up the things ordered by the British, and as a way of gaining time in which to organize for "total defense." But the President has not been willing. It would appear to call in the leaders of organized labor and invite them as a national duty to co-operate in placing the existing industries on an emergency basis in order to obtain maximum production at once. He is still in the stage of wanting to build new plants without using at full capacity the plants which are already in operation.

Reasons for Obstruction. Any what are the reasons for this obstruction? It is alleged that there are still unemployed who should be put to work before the armament workers are allowed to work longer hours; the reason is false because the need is for the work of skilled men specifically trained for specific work, and it will take months to train the untrained. If time is of the essence and it is of the essence, then it is sheer folly not to work longer hours in the critical armament industries. It is alleged also that the social gains of labor also must be defended; the answer is that the social gains of labor in the recent past and its social ambitions in the future can be defended only by defending the independence and the freedom of America. If these are lost all the gains of labor will be lost, and a labor leader who does not realize that is walking in his sleep. Finally, it is not alleged, though it is the controlling consideration that this is an election year. But unless Mr. Wilkie is a very different man from the man he is, he will support and not attack a labor policy suited to the emergency. So, if the existing facilities are not now worked to maximum capacity, it will be because the
